

LIKELY TO GIVE PROBE DECISION AT MONDAY SESSION

Answer Delayed Yesterday Until Shelley Files Brief In the Case

EAGER TO DISPOSE OF IT

Shelley May Appeal To State Supreme Court To Block Bard

HARRISBURG, June 25—(INS)—Monday's scheduled court session, it appeared today, would provide the formal answer on whether there would be a grand jury investigation into the Earle Administration and who would lead it.

A looked for decision yesterday by Judge Paul N. Schaeffer upholding Attorney General Guy K. Bard's action in superseding Republican prosecutor Carl B. Shelley of Dauphin County and a possible call for a grand jury were delayed to give Shelley time to file a brief.

Judge Schaeffer said if the brief was handed in today in time for him to pass on it before noon, he would file his decision then with the clerk of courts. Otherwise, he said, he would hold it over until court convenes Monday morning.

With Judge Schaeffer eager to dispose of the entire case "before Fall," there was a possibility he would order on Monday either the June or September Grand Jury convened and direct the prosecutor to start proceedings.

Bard, if upheld in his supersedeas action, was expected to ask for a short postponement while he or special prosecutors appointed by him familiarize themselves with the evidence.

Shelley has indicated he will appeal to the State Supreme Court in the event Bard's action in superseding him is upheld by Judge Schaeffer. The high court is sitting now and it was expected his appeal, if made, would be considered immediately.

Shelley, through his assistant, Samuel Handler, clashed heatedly with the attorney general in court yesterday over the issue of who was to head the Grand Jury investigation.

Bard insisted his right to supersede Shelley was not "subject to judicial review," contending the power of the attorney general to supersede a district attorney held the sanction of the State Supreme Court.

Shelley contended Bard has "disqualified himself" in the case because he was an appointive officer of Gov. George H. Earle, one of the 14 Democratic leaders accused of graft and corruption. All the charges are an outgrowth of the bitter Democratic primary campaign.

Beagell, who is five feet and four inches tall and weighs 169 pounds, was committed to the Huntingdon Reformatory by the Bucks county court on a charge of felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods July 6, 1936.

The youth, who gave his address as Pipersville, R. D. No. 1 at that time, was charged with stealing chickens and rabbits in the Smithtown section and apprehended by Private Harry P. Christ, of the Penna. Motor Police, and Constable Earl D. Blair, of Doylestown. He was sentenced May term in 1936.

Morell Brown, who graduated from George School recently, decided he wanted to go West a few days ago—and that he would hitch-hike his way to Denver, where he lived for nine years.

Morell left Doylestown at 7 a. m. Monday morning. Thursday his father, E. Newlin Brown, widely known auctioneer at Doylestown, received a letter from him saying that at sunrise Tuesday morning he was leaving Columbus, Ohio, for the West. One ride he got was 325 miles. He had crossed six state boundaries up to that time.

Morell doesn't know how much it helped, but before starting out he put a sign on his back: "If you don't give me a lift my whole family will vote for Roosevelt."

Morrisville has an assessed valuation for taxing purposes for 1938 of $3,299,575, according to figures just received from the Bucks County Commissioners. With the present tax rates this should produce $44,546.96 for borough purposes provided all taxes were collected.

The total real estate assessment is $2,994,625, while occupation assessment totals $579,600.

In the First Ward there is a real estate assessment of $819,525, and occupation assessment of $155,050, with total borough taxes of $11,064.50. In the Second Ward the real estate assessment is $850,020, occupation assessment, $119,900, with taxes of $11,479.50. The Third Ward has $950,270 in real estate assessment, $192,700 in occupation assessment, with taxes of $15,431.28. The Fourth Ward has a

Because of the dampness of the soil many farmers throughout this part of the country are unable to get into the corn fields to cultivate, and as a result the weeds are beginning to grow rapidly. Some of the trucking crops are also badly in need of cultivation.

Very little grain, with the exception of winter barley, has been harvested as yet. If weather conditions improve, the wheat and rye harvest will be in full swing during the next few weeks.

NAME COMMITTEE TO DISCUSS ZONING COUNTY

Group Will Meet in The Near Future With Bucks County Commissioners

BRISTOL REPRESENTED

DOYLESTOWN, June 25—Another step toward the ultimate goal of a zoning county has been taken as a result of the appointment of a committee of seven members who will interview the Bucks County Commissioners in the very near future to discuss the proposal of appointing a planning board in the county.

At a recent meeting sponsored by the Bucks County Real Estate Board held at the Washington Crossing Inn, Mrs. Martha S. Woolley, of Lahaska, chairman of the publicity of the real estate board, was authorized to appoint a committee with herself as chairman, to interview the County Commissioners.

After very careful consideration, with the idea of selecting committee members who will serve and represent the various interests of the county, the following persons were appointed to serve with Mrs. Woolley: Mrs. Calvin S. Boyer, Doylestown, wife of the associate judge of the Bucks county courts; J. Carroll Molloy, Doylestown realtor who has been active in the Bucks County Real Estate Board projects since its organization; J. A. Kooker, Burgess of Sellersville; Hugh Eastburn, Bristol attorney and realtor; Samuel F. Cressman, cashier of the Merchants National Bank of Quakertown; and Walter S. Bishop, owner of Harmony Hill Farm, and one of Bucks county's most successful farmers.

Members of the committee will be accompanied to the meeting to be held with the Bucks County Commissioners, by Morris Llewellyn Cook, of Centre Bridge, and Russell VanNess Black, of Hufnagle Road, Solebury Township, experts on zoning and planning.

The committee members have expressed a great interest in the proposed planning and zoning of Bucks county. They will meet with the idea of impressing upon the Bucks County Commissioners the great need of zoning and planning to prevent the further destruction of the county's outstanding asset—natural beauty and attractive homes.

After discussing the matter with the County Commissioners it is planned to hold a county-wide meeting at which time several hundred persons will attend, representing every active organization operating in the county.

MOTOR TO VIRGINIA

An out-of-town wedding, of interest to many Bristolians, took place this morning at nine o'clock in Philadelphia, when Miss Lillian M. McCaffrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. McCaffrey, 5131 North 11th street, became the bride of Eugene A. Barrett, Jr., son of Mrs. Mary Barrett and the late Eugene A. Barrett, Sr., 1421 W. Montgomery avenue, Philadelphia. The ceremony took place with nuptial Mass in the Holy Child Catholic Church. The Rev. Joseph C. Dougherty officiated. The Rev. Dougherty was a classmate of Mr. Barrett while attending St. Joseph's Preparatory School, Philadelphia, and Holy Cross College in Worcester, Mass.

As the bridal party entered the church, the organist played Lohengrin's wedding march. Attending the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Frank Kessler, Frankford. Serving as best man was John Gavegan, 624 Beaver street, a cousin of the groom.

Her slippers and long lace mitts were white, and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies-of-the-valley.

Closing Exercises Held For Edgington D. V. B. S.

EDDINGTON, June 25—With an average attendance of 187 daily, the two-weeks' session of the union Daily Vacation Bible School, conducted in Edgington Presbyterian Church, ended yesterday. The demonstration of this, the sixth annual school, was held last evening, many parents and friends of the girl and boy students gathering in the parish house to hear the numbers.

The attendance reached for the 10 days ranged from 159 to 211.

The dean of the school, the Rev. Arthur Sargis, pastor of Edgington Presbyterian Church, headed a corps of 25 teachers from Bristol and Bensalem Townships, and Bristol borough, they representing many of the churches of the area.

A "Court of Christian Conduct," case number six, was one of the features of last night's program, a group of students and teachers being aided by the parents. Two motion pictures were shown, one "The Christus," and the second, "Life of George Washington." A series of slides were also enjoyed, these illustrating the Lord's Prayer, Beatitudes, the "Ninety and Nine," etc.

Two young men, natives of the Province of Assam in Northeast India, also spoke, telling of the lives and customs of the people in that land, and of Christian work carried on there.

The program, starting at 7.30 last evening, depicted a session of the vacation Bible school, thus giving the visitors an idea of the work carried on in such classes. The program included "Getting Set," meditations with verses, melodies and prayer; hymns; worship service; 10-minute program by the primary department, including verses, hymns, and the 100th Psalm.

When the justice asked Mrs. Yelland if she recognized the officer who had arrested her, the Trentonian asked, "Are you the one that was there Saturday You don't look like him." And as the hearing proceeded the one on trial asked for a copy of the Pennsylvania motor code. Then followed bickering about the interpretation of the law, whether it was sufficient for a car to

TRENTON WOMAN HAVING "A SWELL TIME" IN PRISON

Mrs. Hilda Yelland Refuses To Pay Fine for Traffic Violation

SENDS HER 4 DOGS HOME

Hopes Officer Doesn't Steal Her Coat; Likes "Air-Conditioned" Jail

(By Staff Representative)

DOYLESTOWN, June 25—"Having a swell time" is the way Mrs. Hilda Yelland expressed the few hours she has so far spent in the Bucks County prison, after refusal to pay $5 fine when found guilty of failing to halt at a "stop" sign in Feasterville a week ago.

The plump Trenton, N. J., resident, committed to jail last evening, said of her treatment in the county jail, "The matron could not have been more kind. I couldn't be more comfortable in a first-class hotel."

The only woman prisoner on a docket of 78, Mrs. Yelland has a long, cold corridor to herself. One cell is occupied as her bed-room, and an adjoining cell as a dining-room.

"As far as air-conditioning goes this is as cool as any theatre I have ever been in."

Still of the opinion she is innocent, the New Jersey resident, when asked if she still thought the Pennsylvania authorities were hard on her replied to Constable Creely who arrested her: "No, but I know you are running a racket over here. And if my husband comes over to pay my fine I will chase him out of jail."

Mrs. Yelland was not finger-printed. When visited in her cell this morning she was wearing a blue and white cotton print.

Her breakfast consisted of bread, cereal and coffee. For luncheon she had sauer kraut and hot "dogs"; and this evening her menu will be prunes and hard-boiled eggs. "They tell me that for Sunday dinner I will get roast beef and mashed potatoes. Well, I can't go on any diet this week-end."

Although she had a headache when she reached Doylestown last evening, Mrs. Yelland stated that it passed off, and she spent a comfortable night, with restful sleep.

"I hope that officer doesn't steal my coat, for I left it in his car," she added.

FEASTERVILLE, June 25—With a kiss for a tiny unnamed puppy, and fond caresses for Black Samjo, Marie and Sissy, her four Pomeranians, Mrs. Hilda Yelland, Trenton, N. J., woman who was arrested one week ago on a charge of failing to stop at a "stop" sign, waved farewell to friends last evening, as she left for the Bucks County Jail, after refusing to pay a fine.

The dogs didn't go to jail as had been planned by their owner. Responsible for the change of heart on the part of their owner who claimed she was unjustly treated, and that she had halted at the intersection, was the fact that the seven weeks' old puppy was ill, and must be given his medicine each hour, and also the insistence on the part of officers involved that they doubted the dogs would be admitted to the Bucks County Prison.

"And if this puppy dies, I'll sue you," was a threat hurled at Constable Charles Creely, of Lower Southampton, who made the arrest last Saturday, when he claims Mrs. Yelland, 588 Hutchinson street, Trenton, drove through a "stop" sign at the junction of Routes 213 and 532 at the rate of 50 miles an hour.

"Help yourself, Mrs.," replied the constable; "I have nothing to do with your dogs."

And so Marie, a handsome brown Pomeranian, Black Samjo and Sissy, and the tiny black pup left for Trenton in the care of friends, while their fond mistress got into the automobile of Constable Creely, and drove to Doylestown for three days, her suitcase "riding" in the rumble seat.

Sixteen gathered in the office of Justice of the Peace George Parsons, here, to hear the testimony in a case that has attracted wide attention during the past few days. Mrs. Yelland has contended ever since her arrest that she would go to jail rather than pay a fine, and that she would bring her dogs and suitcase to the hearing "just in case."

"Don't you think I need some powder?" she queried of the Justice as she took a seat near his desk, fanning herself to secure some relief on a sultry evening. She wore a dress of figured black and white voile with a white bow at the throat. And as the dogs scampered throughout the rooms of the Parsons home she called them to her side. Then with the silken-haired puppy on her lap she queried of an older dog which came to her side, "Whata matter? Too hot? Too hot for anything?"

When the justice asked Mrs. Yelland if she recognized the officer who had arrested her, the Trentonian asked, "Are you the one that was there Saturday You don't look like him." And as the hearing proceeded the one on trial asked for a copy of the Pennsylvania motor code. Then followed bickering about the interpretation of the law, whether it was sufficient for a car to

HIS DUTY

Love versus Duty is the oldest and newest of dramatic issues. The classic tragedies of Hellas were woven about it, and it will be the theme for one of them in the next moving picture you see. For centuries, writers have worked and reworked it to give it new poignancy. Yet surely it was never projected in literature more poignantly than it was this month in real life.

For weeks a "dawn bandit," heavily armed, had robbed and terrorized all-night restaurants and gas stations in Chicago. As descriptions of the youth became more particular, the fear took shape in the mind of a police officer that the criminal was his own wayward boy. The method of the bandit made it quite certain that if cornered there would be gunplay, and considering the numbers of police on the trail the likelihood was strong that the boy would be killed.

Few of us are asked to make a choice as fraught with anguish either way as the one confronting this officer of the law. He made his decision, going to his superiors with a suspicion that by then had become a certainty. The boy was hunted down, tried to shoot his way through a police ring and was machine-gunned to death. His father asked for a leave, and it was granted. Something had died in him, too.

CANADA STANDS ALONE

The British plan to purchase or manufacture war munitions in Canada to the extent of $200,000,000 has been called off. Britain's purchases on this side of the Atlantic will be made in the United States instead.

The refusal of this business by Canada was a significant act of self-denial. An expenditure of such magnitude would have provided a great deal of needed employment contributing materially to the general prosperity. The reasons for the Ottawa government's decision are acceptably of interest.

The first was that Canada feared the risk of involvement in a European war. In addition, it feared the appearance of Canadian militarization, particularly the effect this might have on sectional ill-feeling within the country.

The latter reason does not apply wholly to us, but the former, the risk of war-involvement, certainly does, except as the Neutrality Act may set bounds to the development of our munitions trade. Those who would weaken this act say it will drive away the very sort of business which England may now offer us, because, forsooth, it would forbid our munitions customers wartime access to their American source of supply. Judged by what just has happened, the act does not in truth quite serve that purpose. But to the extent that it does, Canada's example of self-denial should inspire us to rejoice in the fact.

"The British cousin is becoming more and more critical of the policy of treating with the Caesars." After all, what does it get one socially?

The railroad problem in a word: An Illinois child has visited every one of the 48 states and never been aboard a train.

If just an $18 job lay beyond the Alps, it would be something to tell a young grad.

Maybe the dumb and wicked shouldn't have a vote, but what of the nice smart people who vote for the same man?

Trenton Woman Having "Swell Time" in Prison

He halted before entering an intersection, even if a short distance beyond the "stop" sign.

Mrs. Yelland took time out to explain that her mother, an invalid, accompanied her on the trip at the time the arrest was made. "I was explaining the meaning of various highway signs to my mother. And when I reached the intersection in question I did stop. I was slightly beyond the sign, but I halted my car." The officer testified that Mrs. Yelland did not bring her car to a stop until he blew his whistle, "and then she was out in the middle of the highway in question; that was the first time she stopped."

"I was driving slowly, and I did stop once. When you put your hand I stopped for a second time," countered the defendant. "I was driving very slowly, for I can't bump my mother philosophers: 'Do not touch your lips to the queen's jeweled cup, O Vassal, lest your heart break that you are not a king.'"

But it was too dark to see if he was smiling.

Alone in her room—old Nokka had helped her undress, watching with furtive eyes every move she made—Virginia took herself firmly in hand. There were many things that needed looking into, in this strange situation, but one of them was her own foolish heart.

She must attend to that, first. In plain words, she must forget T'Fan. Out of her head he must go, for the present—his smile and his warm lips and his big shoulders in the firelight and his quotations from the philosophers. He was an Asiatic, a solid and unescapable fact. With him away, she might be able to do some clear and necessary thinking.

As for André—she had no time for him tonight.

Now at last she was down to essentials. . . . A temple in Bangkok closed to repairs. The prize of a lifetime Chambon expected to win in Laos. A tale whispered among the people that the Emerald Buddha was again on the march. A vague warning from a French officer, and a signal arrow singing from the jungle. . . . Little facts that twisted in and out, in a fantastic pattern. . . . When she went to sleep, her little jaw was set.

Immediately after breakfast, Virginia beckoned Chambon aside.

"Let's walk down the road," she invited, in her friendliest tones. "But we're pressed for time, this morning. There are some fine pagodas I want to look over."

"The pagodas can wait, just this once."

But even now she did not know how to begin. Finally, she asked calmly, "André, what is the treasure you expect to get for father?"

He turned with a faint smile. "Do you really want to know?"

"I really do."

"A wonderful bronze jar stolen from Ankor Wat, and I think now hidden in the Cave of Million Buddhas near Chieng-khuang. But I wanted it to be a delightful surprise for you both."

"I'm surprised enough—providing you're telling the truth."

"What do you mean, Virginia?"

"There's something mighty queer about this trip of ours. André, are you sure it doesn't concern the Emerald Buddha?"

His large pupils contracted to bright points. "Of course you are joking."

"Far from it, I'm sorry to say."

"Oh, I admit very freely that I'd give my right hand to add the Emerald Buddha to your father's collection! I'd steal it myself, if the chance offered."

Virginia squared her shoulders. "You know, André, I half believe you. I don't want to, but I do."

"Why not? The Siamese stole it from the Laotians?" Then, with a quick change of expression, "But, sweetheart, you are worrying your pretty head about nothing. Surely you know that the Emerald Buddha is closely guarded in Bangkok, out of reach even of an American millionaire."

"I don't know anything—even that I'm your sweetheart." And she was astonished at her own words.

Only his eyes asked a question. "I've just begun to doubt whether I can love a man who wants a bronze vase more than he wants me," she went on, twirling the ring on her finger.

But he took her hand and smiled into her eyes. "My little girl is jealous of a bronze vase? If I do not love beautiful things, could I love you? You are mine—and I am yours—Kismet has spoken."

But for once he had struck the wrong note. Her Yankee blood flushed her cheeks. And when he started to draw her into his arms, she turned away.

"Kismet is an Oriental god and I don't take much stock in it," she told him quietly. "We won't have any more kisses till further notice."

all to pieces." The woman claimed the officer blew no whistle.

When questioned by the justice as to whether she did not feel at the time that she had done something wrong, the woman replied, "I thought I deserved a reprimand, okay."

According to testimony of the officer at the time he stopped Mrs. Yelland, she claimed she did not know there was a "stop" sign at the intersection.

"Oh, no, you didn't blow me down. You didn't even blow my whistle," continued the New Jersey resident. "I saw this officer over at the far side of the highway watching me, instead of being out there helping traffic along."

"He was not there as a traffic officer," came a quick reply from Justice Parsons.

"No, he is just there to catch you," countered Mrs. Yelland.

Bringing up the much-mooted question that only drivers of New Jersey cars are arrested at that point, Mrs. Yelland was informed by the judge that he has more hearings for Pennsylvania drivers than from any other State.

After putting a question regarding the costs, Mrs. Yelland was informed that costs are added where a constable makes an arrest inasmuch as he is not a salaried officer.

"Well, that's what I thought," she said. "I've taken my stand, and I mean to stand by it. I cannot pay a fine. And I'll make no appeal. There are no costs going to be paid by me."

Informed there was no alternative but to send her to jail, the woman replied, "If you see it that way, alright. You're the judge."

"Why did you bring all these dogs with you?" asked Justice Parsons. "Well, there is no one to care for them. They'll have to go with me." Then in regard to her stay in the county jail the prisoner advanced the hope that they "treat me like a lady." "Well, we have pretty good folks in Doylestown," reminded the justice.

Turning to newspaper photographers and reporters, Mrs. Yelland requested copies of the papers containing reports and pictures of the case. "You know my present address. I won't be home for a few days."

Insisting that the dogs be taken to Doylestown with her, the woman was told by the justice, "I never had a case with dogs before. They're not guilty. It's too bad they can't testify in your behalf."

The decision on the part of Creely to take the dogs in his car as far as Fuchingham, then leave them at S. P. C. A. headquarters for the next three days met with a rebuff from the dogs' owner: "No S. P. C. A. is going to care for my dogs. I'll send them home first."

Then came up the question of disposal of her car. "Will the constable bring me back here from Doylestown so I can get my car?" she asked. "Not me," came the quick retort of Creely. "Well, you're being paid for it," she charged.

Carrying the lady's suitcase in gentlemanly style from her car to his, Constable Creely proved himself able to "take it" as some of his friends "razed" him. But he refused to tell them what he would do with any "tip" he might receive.

"What are you going to do with a suitcase in jail?" Creely asked his temporary companion. "You don't think I want to stay there for three days with no change of costume, do you?" was the answer.

And with the administering of medicine to the pup, and a fond farewell to the dogs which a friend offered to drive back to Trenton in the Yelland car, the woman prisoner was off for a quiet week-end.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1938
King Features Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD—In "Kidnaped", Freddie Bartholomew's voice shows signs of changing.

Freddie Bartholomew

Bobby is ten and a half. Now, if his voice changes, Lesser's only problem is the dialogue. This can be managed. The song numbers might be impossible.

The Basil Rathbones, who love to give parties, were considerably upset when the star's son, Rodion, and his fiancée, Caroline Fisher, decided to be married suddenly the other night instead of waiting until June 18.

Basil told me: "Apparently, the kids think that a wedding can be put on like a studio production. You know—everybody on stage six at nine in the morning, and have the extras there."

Guests at this wedding heard a surprise announcement—that the bride's younger sister, Margaret Fisher, eloped to Yuma with Cedric Francis, son of a biggie in the Warner outfit.

Strange case of coincidence. Jack Oakie, Lucille Ball and the "Affairs of Annabelle" troupe were on location at the Lincoln Heights jail. Between takes, Lucille slipped into Judge Crawford's court. She could scarcely believe her ears when she heard the clerk call the name of Jack Oakie.

An old man stepped up in answer. He was there on a charge of drunk driving.

Dashing outside, Lucille got the rest of the troupe and Jack Oakie, the film star, (real name Louis D. Offield) sat in the court and listened to another Jack Oakie get sentenced to jail.

After all these years, the name of Valentino is still magic. The Four Star theater here began a revival of "The Sheik". The picture was scheduled to go on at 2:30 p. m.

Shortly after 9 a. m., a woman sat in the lobby. She carried a box in a box and she never left her post until the theater opened.

Pals of Wallie Beery will get a kick out of this. The film star, who hates public appearances, has consented to be judge at a beauty contest. In Birmingham he'll pick "Miss American Aviation of 1938".

After that he flies to Idaho to join W. S. Van Dyke in a search for locations for "Northwest Passage".

In a $100,000 deal, the Westmores are selling their wig department to Max Factor. The brothers, long identified as studio make-up experts, will concentrate on their local salon, their studio jobs, and on their cosmetic business.

Brother Perc Westmore marries Gloria Dickson June 20. Brother Ernie is off to England where, it is rumored, he will marry Peggy Kent, daughter of film mogul Sidney Kent. Younger brother Buddy is, of course, Martha Raye's ex.

Picture "Alexander's Ragtime Band" should make Florida even more jealous of California, for, apparently, the fountain of youth is located in Hollywood. Although the film covers a time lapse of 27 years, no one in the cast ages appreciably.

You may be sure this is not an oversight on the part of the producers but a new kind of dramatic license.

Errol Flynn and Lili Damita, finally arrived. His yacht comes out later, via the canal. . . . Nice to see Bill Powell at the Ice Follies. He was with Alyce Mills Davey and was looking fine. . . . Loretta Young and George Brent also were in the audience. . . . Mickey Rooney is buying a ranch and will build a home for himself and his mother. . . . Eddie Sutherland was at the roller derby for three nights in a row. We spent picture plans. . . . Mary Anita Loos has had several jewelry designs accepted by Paul Flate. . . . Bob Tatlinger, who has done a fine job for Warners in Hollywood, is off on a flying trip to New York. . . . And the annual trek to the New England stock theaters is commencing. Mary Brian goes to Connecticut to do "Honey" and Made Evans to Massachusetts for a new play.

The most modern of heroes, airplane test pilots, are glorified in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first aviation picture in more than two years, "Test Pilot," which stars Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy, with Lionel Barrymore heading a major supporting cast. It opens at the Grand Theatre, Sunday, for an engagement of two days.

The picture, based on an original story by Frank Wead, and giving an intimate insight into the lives of men who dare death to pave the heavens for future generations, has been acclaimed by aviation experts, military and civil, to be the truest picture of aviation ever produced.

BRISTOL

"Invisible Enemy," exciting and dramatic Republic Picture opening today at the Bristol Theatre, brings to the screen a realistic portrayal of political life on the English continent. Financiers striving for monetary gain from illegal sales of oil lands; clandestine love affairs of a capitalist's money-mad and adventuresome wife; mysterious meetings between unscrupulous promoters and foreign agents; and the vindication of a former British Intelligence Officer who had once betrayed his government—all leading up to an unexpected and dynamic climax.

A newly discovered explosive—strong enough to destroy the capitals of Europe, becomes the football for contending forces—with the peace of Europe in the balance in the latest Bulldog Drummond adventure, "Bulldog Drummond's Revenge," which opens at the Bristol Theatre today.

When the scientist who has developed the explosive is discovered murdered in an airplane by his own secretary, Howard finds it impossible to keep his promise to his fiancée, Louise Campbell, that he will give up his work as an amateur detective and settle down. He becomes even more involved when the murderer appears on the train in which he and his bride-to-be are traveling to the continent, and murders his accomplice in a nearby compartment.

GRUNDY NINE FAILS TO KEEP LEAD; LOSES, 3 TO 2

Failing to keep a lead built up in the fourth inning, the William H. Grundy Company ball team dropped a close tilt to the Odd Fellows last night on the Edgely ball field. Final score was 3-2.

The affair turned out to be a hurling match between Jake Praul, of the winners, and Ralphie Narcisi, Grundy's. The Oddies took a 2-0 lead in the second but in the fourth the Frymen nicked Praul for a trio of markers to take the lead. But the Radcliffe street clan tied it in the fifth and scored an earned run in the sixth to win the contest.

Four hits was the best the losers could muster off Praul. He had eleven strikeouts and issued one pass. Narcisi was four for seven hits. Both teams played good ball afield.

The winning run was counted when Praul slammed a triple to left and came home on Wilmot's single. In the previous inning, a hit by Dick, a sacrifice by Watson and a single by Purcell tied the score. The other Oddies runs were registered when Wilmot was passed, Dick reached base on an error, Dewsnap fled out and Watson hit safely.

Grundy's markers all came in the fourth. Monachello got to first on an error. DiBlassio forced Monachello. Mondo, Antonelli and Kervick smacked out singles and three runners scampered across the plate.
